This house meets criteria B and C for individual listing on the National Register as one of the finest Greek Revival houses in Lexington. It possesses integrity of design, materials, and workmanship. In addition, it was associated with the Muzzey family, who were prominent in Lexington in the seventeenth, eighteenth, and nineteenth centuries, and was the childhood home of David Saville Muzzey (b. 1870), the author of well-known textbooks on U.S. history.
